

Why does Tonga rely on international aid?

Tonga's natural disasters often cause millions of dollars of damage. As an impoverished country, Tonga's government lacks the funds necessary to finance reconstruction materials and pay construction workers. For this reason, Tonga relies heavily on international aid.

How much aid did the United States give to Tonga in 2022?

Though Tonga's natural disasters are unpredictable, international aid provides hope for relief each time. As the repairs from Tonga's natural disasters are widespread and costly, in January 2022, the United States pledged more than $2.5.

Does the United States support Tonga?

The path to recovery is not easy for Tonga, but the aid does not stop with the United States' support. British and Australian ships entered Tongan waters in January 2022 to provide necessities such as medical supplies, water and food.

Why are new construction jobs opening in Tonga?

New construction projects since 2018 have created new positions specifically for assisting with relief after Tonga's natural disasters. Tonga's natural disasters create a need for construction assistance across all areas of Tonga, including all outlying islands and the main island.

Should International Workers be allowed to work in Tonga?

WESTERMAN: And even though Tonga has a pretty high vaccination rate, letting in international workers could put their population at risk, and officials are just not willing to do that. But this also means that aid groups are going to have to work with Tonga remotely, which is not easy.

How will foreign aid affect Tonga's economy in 2022?

Each new job is invaluable considering Tonga's first month of storms in 2022. Foreign aid can also potentially increase the salaries of construction workers during these most recent reparation efforts, helping them to rise out of poverty. Tonga's natural disasters often cause millions of dollars of damage.
